Columbian Club Reception.

Next Friday evening, Nov. 29, at 8 p. m., the members of the Columbian Club will be in gracious readiness to welcome, and will endeavor to entertain, their friends at Garland chapel.

There will be good music. Dr. Gehring will give a short, informal talk upon Virchow, the greatest scientist in the world, whose eightieth birthday has just been honored in Berlin. Dr. Gehring will talk upon some of the personal characteristics of the great man as observed in the class-rooms of the University of Berlin, in the relation of professor and student.

Then each member of this versatile and brilliant Club will give a short resume of the characteristics of some famous woman. This feature of the evening will possess unusual interest since it has been arranged with special reference to the enlightenment of a distinguished guest as to the characteristics of the women of history, who will pass before the mental vision of the audience like pictures thrown upon a screen.

The Club extends a most cordial invitation through the gracious columns of the News, to all interested friends, in or out of the village, between the ages of eighteen and ninety years of age, to be present and receive its hospitality without further notice. Sec.

A Card of Thanks.

We wish to extend our sincere and grateful thanks to our neighbors and friends, who have so kindly assisted us in the care of Mrs. Holt, during her long and painful illness, and also to the unknown friends who have left substantial gifts at our door.

E. E. HOLT,
PIERRE M. HOLT.

A Card.

We, the undersigned, do hereby agree to refund the money on a 50-cent bottle of Greene's Warranted Syrup of Tar if it fails to cure your cough or cold. We also guarantee a 25-cent bottle to prove satisfactory or money refunded.

Joseph P. Gaudet, aged 34 years, 9 months, 1 day, died of pneumonia, at the Riverside House, last Sunday afternoon, after an illness of one week. Mr. Gaudet has been employed in Bethel and vicinity for several years and will be remembered as an honest, faithful, industrious laborer. It has been Mr. Gaudet's wish for some years, that his father, Peter Gaudet, who resided in Prince Edwards Island, should remove his family to Bethel, and he lived to see his wish realized as the family, consisting of several persons, arrived last week, and assisted in the care of the son. The remains were sent to Prince Edward Islands Monday. Much sympathy is expressed for these strangers in a strange land.

Woman's Relief Corps.

GREETING:

To all our friends, though far and near, We crave your kind attention; So please to lend us now your ear While we a subject mention.

The ladies of this Corps will hold, On a day not distant far, If we have been correctly told, A "HANDKERCHIEF BAZAAR."

So this, then, is our plain brief, To aid our enterprise, You each shall send a Handkerchief

Of any kind or size. To be without a Handkerchief You know is quite distressing, From EACH CORPS LET ONE BE SENT, 'TILL SURELY BE A BLESSING.

Please send by December 14th, 1901. The above poem shows that Bethel Relief Corps is still alive, and this Handkerchief Bazaar will be held Dec. 18, 1901. Further particulars will be given next week.

Lumbering Notes.

Some two feet of snow in the woods has made lively business for the lumbermen and the prospects are favorable for a very large output.

Messrs. M. L. & Y. A. Thurston, who are among the largest contractors in this vicinity and who have a big contract with the International Paper Company, have several sub-contractors at work for them and will make a large showing at the end of the season.

Mr. Warren A. Emery has a contract with the Thurstons to put in a million of spruce from land in Riley Plantation, landing the timber on Sunday River, about thirteen miles above Bethel. Mr. Emery has his teams and some over twenty men in the woods now and is getting a good start.

Mr. Fred L. Edwards has some 40 men at work for him upon different tracts, cutting pulp timber, and will put in and buy some 3,000 cords. Mr. Eben S. Kilborn has let several contracts and will this season put in a large amount of different kinds of timber from his various timber tracts.

The Hastings of Bethel, who own some 17,000 acres of valuable timber land in Batchelder's Grant near Gilead will operate as usual this winter, not only upon this land but upon other tracts. They are among the largest operators and buyers in this section.

Messrs. Kilborn & Herrick of Bethel, will cut considerable pulpwood from their lands and will buy large quantities for shipment.

The Bethel Manufacturing Co. has a crew in the woods cutting different kinds of timber, some of which will be manufactured at its Bethel mill and some shipped or landed on the river. This company will buy all the birch that it can procure at its mill, and also spruce, pine, fir and hemlock which will be manufactured into long lumber. The company has just shipped a large quantity of dry wood which was taken out last season.

In the Umbagog Lake region there will be cut from the Coe lands by Mr. George Blanchard, some 6,000,000, and by Baker Thurston, some 2,000,000 of spruce which will be landed on the lake and taken down the Androscoggin to the mills at Rumford Falls.

Besides the larger operators, there are numerous farmers who will take off quantities ranging from ten to one hundred cords of timber either for landing on the river or sale at some of the mills. Everyone is busy and will continue to be so during the winter and the activity in the lumber field will be as great as ever in Northern Oxford. Higher wages prevail for help and $28 to $30 is paid per month. All kinds of feed for teams and nearly all supplies that go into the woods are higher so that the scale of contract prices has necessarily been increased.

One large former operator, Mr. C. E. Ryerson, late of Bethel, has died since last season. Each winter for several years he has operated upon the lake lands and his yearly cut has been large. He will be greatly missed.

Married.

In Shelburne, N. H., Nov. 19, Leslie N. Kimball of Albany and Miss Maude Emery of Shelburne, N. H.

"Just to give thanks in the old-time way,
There, in the little house again,
With all the dear ones, Thanksgiving Day.

Just to say, 'Father, I thank Thee'—then

Back to the toil and the strife of men." Six fine deer were taken up by the stage Tuesday.

Mr. Peter Gaudet and family have arrived from Prince Edwards Island, and will make their permanent home in the States. They have taken the upper tenement in Carl Godwin's house, for the winter.

Mr. Newell Godwin of Andover brought a party of sportsmen to Bethel depot, Thursday, and made a short stay here on his return.

John Carlton has moved his family back home, although he still has charge of the ferry at the Bartlett place.

There was no service at Union church, Sunday, as Rev. Mr. Congdon was called to Upton to attend a funeral.

Mrs. Scott Godwin of Rumford Falls visited at H. S. Hastings' last week.

Harry Bailey of Saco visited at the home of his father, Albert Bailey, over Sunday.

We were glad to see Miss Bessie Soar with us again after her long absence at Wilson's Mills. She went to Errol, Saturday, where she will teach.

The winter term of school has opened under the instruction of Miss Fannie Cross.

Bear River Patrons have returned from the National Grange full of enthusiasm, and we anticipate the recital of their visit, in addition to our Thanksgiving feast, which occurs at the regular meeting, next Thursday evening.

To the Public.

Allow me to say a few words in praise of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I had a very severe cough and cold and feared I would get pneumonia, but after taking the second dose of this medicine I felt better, three bottles of it cured my cold and the pains in my chest disappeared entirely. I am most respectfully yours for health, RALPH S. MYERS, 64-Thirty-seventh St., Wheeling, W. Va.

The Gunmaker Of Moscow

By SYLVANUS COBB, JR.

CHAPTER V.

THE DUEL.

On the following morning Ruric was up betimes, and at the breakfast table not a word of the one all absorbing theme was uttered. After the meal was finished the gunmaker went out to his shop and took down from one of the closets a long leather case in which were two swords, only different in size. They were Toledo blades and of most exquisite workmanship and finish. Ruric took out the heavier one, which was a two edged weapon with a cross hilt of heavily gilded metal. He placed the point upon the floor, and then, with all his might, he bent the blade till the pommel touched the point. The lithic steel sprang back to its place with a sharp clang, and the texture was not started. Then he struck the flat of the blade upon the anvil with great force. The ring was sharp and clear, and the weapon remained unharmed.

"By St. Michael, Paul, Moscow does not contain another blade like that. Damascus never saw a better."

Thus spoke the gunmaker to his boy as he balanced the beautiful weapon in his hand.

"I think you are right, my master," the boy returned, who had beheld the trial of the blade with unbounded admiration. "But," he added, "could you not temper a blade like that?"

"Perhaps if I had the steel. But I have not. The steel of these two blades came from India and was originally in one weapon, a ponderous two handed affair belonging to a Bengal chieftain. The metal possesses all the hardness of the finest razor, with the elasticity of the most subtle spring. My old master at Toledo gave me these as a memento. Were I to mention the sum of money he was once offered for the largest one you would hardly credit it."

"How much?" asked Paul, with a boy's curiosity.

"It was a sum equal to about 700 ducats."

"And yet he gave it away."

"Aye, for its price was but imaginary, while its worth to him was only commensurate with the good it did him. If he told the truth, he loved me, and these he gave me as a parting gift as the best patterns I could wish for when making such."

After this Ruric put up the small sword, and then he gave Paul a few directions about the work, promising to be back before night. The faithful boy shook his head dubiously as he heard this promise, but he said nothing, and shortly afterward Ruric went into the house. Just then Alaric Orsa drove up to the door.

Ruric was all ready but putting on his bonnet and pelisse. His mother was in the kitchen. He went to her with a smile upon his face. He put his arms about her and drew her to his bosom.

"God bless you, my mother! I shall come back." He said this and then kissed her.

"God keep—and!"

It was all she could say.

Ruric gazed a moment into her face, then he kissed her again, and again he said:

"God bless you, my mother! I shall come back."

He dared not stop to speak more. Gently seating his fond mother upon a chair, he turned and hurried from the place. In the hall he threw on his pelisse and bonnet, and then he opened the door and passed out.

"Have you a good weapon?" asked Orsa as the horse started on.

"I have a fair one. I think it will not deceive me," returned Ruric.

"I asked," continued Orsa, "because Damonoff prides himself upon the weapon he wears. It is a German blade, and he thinks he can cut in twain the blade of any other weapon in Moscow with it."

"I have a good weapon," Ruric said quietly, "and one which has stood more tests than most swords will bear." And after some further remarks he related the peculiar circumstances attending the making of the sword and his possession of it.

At length they struck upon the river, and in half an hour more they reached the appointed spot. The day was beautiful. The sun shone brightly upon the glistening snow, and the air was still and calm. The sharp frost of the atmosphere served only to brace the system up, and Ruric threw open his pelisse that he might breathe more freely. He had been upon the ground but a few minutes when the other party came in sight around the head of the river.

As soon as the count and his second arrived and the horses had been secured the lieutenant proposed that they should repair to the building which was close at hand. This was a large open boathouse which was unused and deserted in the winter, and it was proposed to go in there because the reflection of the strong sunlight from the bright snow was calculated to blind and blur the eye.

"Ha! What means that?" uttered Orsa as he saw a sledge just turning the bend of the river with an officer in it.

"It is only a surgeon," replied Damonoff. "I would not cut a man's flesh without giving him a fair chance to survive it."

"And then you may find him serviceable to yourself, eh?" suggested the lieutenant.

"Of course. There is no telling what may happen."

In a moment more the new sledge came up, and Ruric recognized its inmate as an army surgeon whom he had seen before, though he knew not his name.

"Now for the old boathouse," cried Urzen.

"Aye," added Damonoff. "Let us have this business done, for I would be back to dinner. I dine with Olga today, and a fair maiden awaits my coming."

"Notice him not," whispered Orsa, who walked close by Ruric's side. "That is one of his chief points when engaged in an affair of this kind. He hopes to get you angry and so unhinge your nerves."

"Never fear," returned the gunmaker. "Be sure he only brings new danger to himself, for such efforts will find their point in the muscle of my arm."

The party halted when they reached the interior of the rough structure, and the count threw off his pelisse and drew his sword. Ruric followed his example.

"Sir count," the latter said as he moved a step forward, "ere we commence this work I wish all present to understand distinctly how I stand. You have sought this quarrel from the first. Without the least provocation from me you have insulted me most grossly, and this is the climax. So, before God and man, be the result upon your own head."

An angry reply was upon Damonoff's lips, but he did not speak it. He turned to his antagonist and said:

"Will you measure weapons, sir? Mine may be a mite the longest. I seek no advantage, and I have one here of the same length and weight as my own if you wish it."

"I am well satisfied as it is," replied Ruric.

"Then take your ground. Are you ready?"

"I am."

The two swords were crossed in an instant, with a clear, sharp clang. There was some contrast between the two combatants, but not much apparently. The count was a little taller, and Ruric was somewhat heavier. But to a close observer there was a peculiar contrast in the bearing of the two men. That breast swelling out so nobly and those massive shoulders, made for the seat of physical power, were Ruric's alone to possess. Yet Conrad Damonoff was accounted a strong man. In the athletic sports of the court club he had few superiors and not many equals. But Ruric Nevel had never shown his strength there.

Now, for the first time, that contemptuous look passed from the count's face. As his eye caught his antagonist's position, as he noticed the calm, dignified, quiet ease of every limb and as he caught the deep, mystic fire of those expressive eyes he knew that he had no common amateur to deal with.

At length Conrad Damonoff started back, and a quick cry escaped his lips. His antagonist's point had touched his bosom. It had pressed against his heart and had not been driven home. Well he knew that his life was his no longer, for the gunmaker had gained it and spared it.

"You fence well," he gasped, struggling to regain his composure.

"You are not a novice," returned Ruric calmly, at the same time allowing his point to drop.

"Come on," the count uttered, now gathering all his energies for another effort.

And again the weapons were crossed. This time Damonoff was more guarded. Before he had been impelled by his own assurance, but now he was forced to regard his opponent's power. Ruric quickly found that the other was more careful than at first, and he carried his own point accordingly. At the twelfth stroke the count made a feint to the left, then at the throat, and then, with a quick, lightning-like motion, he brought his point to his antagonist's heart. But his meaning had been read from the first by Ruric. The youth caught the motion of the eye, and he saw that his head was the place looked to. His own movement was almost instinctive. He received his antagonist's sword midway upon his own blade, then moved his arm quickly forward and caught the point under his cross guard; then, with all his power, he wrenched his arm upward and backward, and the count's sword went flying across the building. It struck the opposite wall with a dull clang, and the next instant it was half buried in the snow.

"Fear not, sir," said Ruric as the count started back, with both hands raised. "I never strike an unarmed man."

Damonoff's arms fell to his side, and a deep blush of shame mantled his face.

"By St. Paul," cried the surgeon, "your life is forfeited, sir count, and now you should be satisfied."

"No, no," the discomfited man exclaimed, starting up with rage and mortification. "That was but a slip. 'Twas a false step, a cowardly feint. I am not overcome."

"But man of mortality, even now your life is Nevel's. He may run you through now if he chooses."

"But he has not," the count cried, springing to where his sword had fallen and snatching it up.

"Sir count," here spoke Ruric calmly, but with marked contempt, "you should not blame me for what I have done, for thrice have you tried to break my sword."

"Then try it again!" Damonoff returned. "Take my sword again if you can."

"Perhaps not," our hero retorted. "But be sure your sword shall be used no more after this day."

"Ha! Brag not, but strike. If you can!"

The conclusion of the sentence was drowned by the clash of steel. At the second stroke the count made another furious thrust at his antagonist's heart. Ruric sprang quickly aside, and with the whole power of his good right arm he struck Damonoff's blade close to the haft and broke it in twain.

"My other sword," the count shouted, now blinded by absolute madness. "Oh, give me my other!"

"Hold!" cried both the surgeon and Stephen Urzen in concert. "You are mad, Conrad."

"Mad? Oh, I shall be mad! Where is my sword?" the reckless man yelled, casting the bladeless pommel down.

"But will you not listen one?"—"Away, I say! Shall I give up because my sword is broken? By the gods, the weapon deceived me. Where is the other?"

"Deceived thee, Conrad?" repeated the surgeon sarcastically. "By the Holy Ghost, had thy head but received a hundredth part of the blow 't would not be upon thy shoulders now!"

But the count was beyond all reason. In his madness he saw not that his sword had been broken on purpose. He did not see that he had been at his antagonist's mercy. But his friends saw it all.

"Ha! Whom have we here?" cried Alaric, whose eye had caught a dark form at the entrance of the old building.

It was Vladimir, the monk.

"How now? What seek ye here?" asked Urzen as the fat, burly monk waddled toward the party.

"I heard the clash of arms, my son, as I rode by, and I stopped to see what it was. Surely where the work of death is going on a child of the holy church of God may come."

"Aye," cried the count. "Come in and welcome, but meddle not. Now, my sword, where is it?"

Reluctantly Urzen brought forward the second sword, but ere he gave it up he said:

"Beware, Conrad. You had better—"

"Peace, babbler!" the excited fool hissed, snatching the weapon and then turning quickly upon the gunmaker.

Thus far Ruric had remained silent, but he felt it his duty to speak now.

"Sir count," he said in a tone so stern and authoritative and with a look so commanding that the other was held in abeyance by it, "I must speak one word. You have provoked a quarrel with me, and you have challenged me. I have no fear of death when duty calls for my life, but I would not die thus, nor would I slay a fellow being thus. Six separate times today since our swords first crossed have I spared your life."

"Liar!"—"and twice have I had you before me unarmed," Ruric continued without noticing the interruption. "I had hoped this would have shown you that I sought not harm to you and, furthermore, that you were no match for me at this kind of work."

"Out, fool!" yelled Damonoff, now fairly frothing with rage. "If you dare not cross swords again, say so, but do not crawl off like a coward!"

"One word more," uttered Ruric, palling for an instant beneath the unmerciful insult of the senseless tongue that assailed him, and he stood proudly erect while he spoke, "before these men here assembled and before God I swear that thus far I have spared you, but my own life may be the forfeit if I trifle with you more. So now beware. You have sufficient warning."

Perhaps the count really overlooked the facts of which Ruric had spoken. In his ungovernable rage he may have fancied that 'twas only accident that had worked against him. However, he started forward once more and made a furious lunge at his antagonist.

"Now," he gasped, "play your best, for my sword's my own."

But Ruric spoke not. He saw that the count was stronger than before—for his rage seemed to give him a maniac's power—and that he was earnest only for life or death. He struck quickly and furiously, and his movements were strange and unprecedented. He threw up all rules of exercise and cut and thrust only in wild madness. Twice Ruric came nigh being run through. He lost all run of his opponent's play and quickly saw that he must put a stop to the conflict or run the risk of leaving a childless mother in his home to see that day's sun sink.

"Will you give over?" he asked as he struck the count's point down.

"Never! Submit to such as you? Bah!"

A few moments more the conflict lasted. One more opportunity he had at Damonoff's heart, and he spared him. All present saw it save the madman.

"Fool!" uttered the monk, who trembled from head to foot with excitement, his huge belly shaking like a bag of jelly. "Will you throw away your own life, Ruric Nevel? Shall I tell your mother you left her of your own will?"

This mention of his mother called the last lingering doubt from Ruric's mind. Again he struck the opposing point down, and then he pressed his own point upon the count's bosom. He avoided the heart—he tried to avoid the vitals—but he threw his arm forward, and his glittering blade passed through the fool's body. With an expression of pain upon his features he started back and rested his reeking point upon the trodden snow. The count came furiously on again, but he struck wildly and at random, Ruric merely warding off his blows, until finally his arm sank, fainting, back into the arms of his attendants.

Some men are willing to suffer all the privations of life in order to die in the midst of wealth and then go to perdition and leave it.

"Last winter an infant child of mine had croup in a violent form," says Elder John W. Rogers, a Christian Evangelist, of Filley, Mo. "I gave her a few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and in a short time all danger was past and the child recovered."

This remedy not only cures croup, but when given as soon as the first symptoms appear, will prevent the attack. It contains no opium or other harmful substance and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult.

Intemperate Mothers.

Whenever we attend a temperance lecture we generally expect to hear it addressed to men, or as making them the chief culprits. But from many sources of authority we learn that there is a large class of women, and those not in the slums, equally in need of temperance lectures. In many large cities in license States are seen elegantly furnished liquor saloons and most of the women who are constantly passing in and out of their doors are well-dressed women, who from a glance, we should judge, belong to the middle classes.

It seems to me, that of all people in the world, a mother should be the last to fall into intemperate habits. However low, ignorant or degraded a woman may be, the instinct of motherhood is there, but since all good feelings and instincts are blighted under the curse of intemperance, maternal love must be blighted with the rest.

If a child has any rights at all, he surely ought to have the right to be born well.

The most of us who live back here in quiet country and village homes, in this good old prohibition State, can little realize the far-reaching effect of strong drink.

Intemperance goes hand in hand with insanity, immorality, vice, and disease.

We generally think of the drunkard's child as suffering from poverty, ignorance and neglect.

But there is still another effect of inherited disease and imbecility which cannot be realized without being seen.

I presume Dr. Bennett of Norway made that plain in her paper on Prenatal Influence, which she gave at the W. C. T. U. Convention last year, which I feel very sorry that I did not hear.

But I wish to say a few words from my own observation, concerning the children of the drunkard, when either the father or mother or both, drink.

Several years ago I was house-keeper in a children's hospital, which was connected with a school of over four hundred children of State waifs, paupers, and homeless little ones. A large majority of these children were sent there directly or indirectly, from intemperance in their parents. They were all ages from babies to sixteen years of age. There was also a ward for mothers and infants who had no homes or support.

Connected with the institution were schools from the kindergarten up through the grammar school grade, with church and Sabbath school every Sunday, and chapel exercises every evening.

As soon as the children were old enough to work, they were obliged to work half a day and attend school the other half. The girls were taught to sew, sweep, make beds, wash dishes etc., while the boys had a tailor room where they made their own clothes, a cobbler's room, a carpenter's shop, besides many worked in the laundry and on the farm.

So that those who remained there until they were sixteen years old, had a good common school education and were well trained in work, and three-fourths of them made respectable citizens. But there were certain ones who were born into the world so crippled mentally, morally and physically from the sins of their parents that nothing on earth could ever make them what God means a child should be, and it was among these poor unfortunate that my work lay most of the time.

The hospital was a building apart from the others, and there we had the temporary as well as the chronic cases.

In passing through the wards and play rooms it would bring tears to your eyes to simply glance at those children upon whom intemperance and vice had set their seal so plainly that anyone could read.

There were the foolish with vacant stare and silly grin, there were sore eyes, there were crippled, paralyzed, consumptive, sick and deaf children in all stages.

Every morning in the hall outside the doctor's office, stood a long row of children, each waiting their turn for their regular morning inspection, while those confined to beds or chairs were visited in the wards. It was one of my duties to remain in their dining-room while they were eating to keep order, but I took my meals with the teachers in another building.

As I would stand in the dining-room and watch them march in, even after months of familiarity, the tears would come. I said "march in," for I do not know what word to use; some limped, some came on crutches, some crept or crawled, some felt their way blindly, and in my heart I would ask, "Lord, who is to blame for all this?"

I firmly believe that nearly all of the blame can be laid upon alcoholic drinks.

One large Irish boy who was perfectly well, but whose mother was a perpetual drunkard, living about a mile from there, was assigned to me as my special chore boy. One beautiful evening, while I was gone to my supper, Pat took it into his head to run away. I didn't really blame him, in my heart, but of course it was my duty to report him immediately to the superintendent, which I did.

A sheriff and one of the school officers immediately went to his mother's house, who protested vigorously that Pat had not come home. Nevertheless the men insisted on searching her little house, and the old woman would keep blowing out the lamp, which made them sure Pat was there.

But though they searched the house over they could not find him till they heard a dreadful racket of tin dishes in the pantry. Upon going there, they discovered Patrick laid away upon the top shelf where he had accidentally hit a tin pan and sent it to the floor. Pat would have had a severe punishment and been put to hard work on the farm, if I had not begged the superintendent to let me try him again, and the boy was so grateful that he served me well as long as I stayed.

I became much interested in one boy, who was the most pitifully

A SUBMARINE MARVEL.

Men Under Water For Fifteen Hours Without Experiencing Discomfort
New York, Nov. 25.—In the presence of a big crowd which assembled to witness the emerging of the submarine boat Fulton, that craft rose from the bottom of the bay yesterday morning at 10:30 o'clock, with all well and greatly surprised to find there was a storm raging. The test of the Fulton's staying powers was highly satisfactory, not only to the officers of the company that built her and the naval officers present, but to those who went to the bottom in the boat. They report that there was not the slightest discomfort to them during the more than 15 hours of submersion beneath the surface.

Captain Cable of the Holland company, who was in command, said that the boat could have remained down for three months if there was food enough on board. Although there was but six feet of water over the top of the turret, those on board felt nothing of the storm. Through the night there was a light rolling motion to the craft, but this was ascribed to the regular motion of the water and not to the disturbance which was rolling the waves high on the shore.

Immediately on coming to the surface the Fulton, under her own power, ran alongside the dock and tied up. Rear Admiral Lowe and Lieutenant MacArthur refused to go into any discussion of the performance of the boat except to say they would be satisfied to stay down longer. Their unwillingness to talk is because they are here as naval officers and will make their report to Washington. They are, however, known to be enthusiastic over the work of the Fulton thus far. Admiral Lowe is said to have privately praised the performance of the Fulton and to have said she was not only a wonder, but doing more than was expected.

Members of the crew say they experienced no difficulty in breathing, and that the air was all that could be desired and much purer and better than in an ordinary closed room in which are several persons. Every piece of machinery worked to perfection during the night. The men ate two meals while under water and enjoyed them. Most of them obtained three or four hours sleep.

Leicester May Have Skunk Farm
Leicester, Mass., Nov. 21.—Charles Bruce of New York was in Leicester yesterday looking over the town with a view of starting a skunk farm. During the past few months there have been several items in the local papers about the large number of skunks in Leicester and how the animals had become so tame that they ran about the main streets. This is what attracted Mr. Bruce to Leicester. Mr. Bruce is a stockholder in a company that carries on a skunk farming business in New York.

Taney Is President
Washington, Nov. 22.—At the session of the Textile Workers of America yesterday, the convention completed the new constitution by which the different organizations of textile workers which have been united are to be governed hereafter. The following officers were elected: James Taney, Fall River, Mass., president; S. P. Thompson, Columbus, S. C., first vice president; M. J. Connor, Thompsonville, Conn., second vice president, and Albert Hibbert, Dover, N. H., secretary.

Dr. Greer For Bishop
Springfield, Mass., Nov. 20.—The new diocese of the Protestant Episcopal church, composed of Haddam, Hampshire, Franklin, and Berkshire counties and all of Worcester county, except Southbridge, was formally organized in primary convention of parochial delegates here yesterday, and after selecting as its name "the diocese of western Massachusetts" gave a unanimous election to Dr. David H. Greer of St. Bartholomew's church, New York city, for bishop.

Old Subjects Visit Queen Eli
Salt Lake City, Nov. 25.—Former Queen Liliuokalani and her attendants are the guests of the Hawaiian colony in Salt Lake City and will be entertained here until Tuesday, when she will resume her journey eastward. The Hawaiian colony here is quite large and today many of the deposed queen's former subjects called on her at her apartments.

To Bombard Colon

Colon, Nov. 25.—The Colombian gunboat General Pinzon arrived in this harbor yesterday morning. The excitement in Colon at once became intense. The Pinzon will not be permitted to land the troops she is carrying at this point. If such an attempt is made the Liberals assert they will fire on them.

As a result of an exchange of notes between the United States gunboat Machias and the General Pinzon, Ignacio Polanco, commanding the Pinzon, which has 600 men on board, yesterday officially notified the American, British and French warships now in the harbor that he intended to bombard Colon at noon today, thus giving 24 hours notice.

The various consuls are notifying their respective fellow citizens that refuge may be had on board the warships.

The bombardment of the town of Colon is absolutely necessary to fire across the railroad tracks, and the railroad employees will probably refuse to work. Lieutenant Commandant McCrean of the Machias is the senior naval officer and he awaits instructions from Washington regarding the threat to bombard.

There is much excitement in Colon. Breadstuffs are being erected in the public thoroughfares of Panama. The townsfolk in the vicinity of these are hastily removing to safer places.

All persons known to be Liberals are arrested on sight. The government has declared its intention to contest every inch of ground if an intruder to the city is effected.

A DAINY SCHEME.

Nothing so dainty for my lady's boudoir as our Combination Lace Window Canopies.

These comprise for each window, one pair Savoy. Curtains to hang next to the window, and not to be draped, one pair Ruffled Net Curtains to be draped back either with the common loops, lace loops, or the French Knot, and one Flounce Valance. The edging insertion and net all to match. The Savoy Curtains are hung from a straight rod but the Ruffled Curtains and Valance are to be hung from a bent rod so shaped as to make a canopy. A window seat, or a tabourette holding a daintily colored Jardiniere and fern or small palm completes the dainty scheme.

Treasury Not Overburdened

Colon, Nov. 22.—Provisional appointments were made by the Liberals yesterday. The treasury safe was opened yesterday afternoon in the presence of witnesses. It was found to contain 1080 Colombian dollars, equivalent to $450 gold. The former postmaster also handed over to the Liberals the cash and the postage stamps in his possession. The municipal offices, in charge of Liberals, will probably be opened today. The city is perfectly quiet.

An English Author Wrote:

"No shade, no shine, no fruit, no flowers, no leaves,—November!" Many Americans would add no freedom from catarrh, which is so aggravated during this month that it becomes constantly troublesome.

There is abundant proof that catarrh is a constitutional disease. It is related to scrofula and consumption, being one of the waste diseases. Hood's Sarsaparilla has shown that what is capable of eradicating scrofula, completely cures catarrh and taken in time prevents consumption. We cannot see now any sufferer can put off taking this medicine, in view of the widely published record of its radical and permanent cures. It is undoubtedly America's Greatest Medicine for America's Greatest Disease—Catarrh.

How to Make Apple Pan Dowdy.

Butter a deep, brown earthenware pudding dish, peel and slice apples enough to fill it. For two quarts of apples use a teaspoonful each of powdered cinnamon and salt, half a pound of brown sugar, half a pint of elder or water. Thoroughly mix the spice, salt and sugar upon the apples and pour the water or elder over them. Cover with a plain pie paste, place in a moderate oven and bake slowly for three hours, taking care that the oven is not hot enough to burn the crust. This may be eaten hot or cold, with sugar and cream.

"Give your thanks for sunshine;
Give your thanks for rain;
Poverty is no disgrace,
And pleasure follows pain.
If the turkey's little,
Let's be thankful still,
Maybe if 'twere larger
It would make the family ill;
Thankful for the old folks,
For the children's funny ways—
But for grandmas and for babies
We would have no holidays."

Died in Riverside, Wash., Oct. 19, Ida A., wife of Charles A. Risteen, formerly of Burleigh, the youngest daughter of the late Dudley
Shields of Aroostook county, aged 43 years, 1 month. Besides a husband, she leaves a son, twelve years of age, two sisters in Michigan, two in Minnesota, and one in Newry.—Mrs. Alice Vail, to whom this is a sad blow, as she buried her husband last September. They have the sympathy of many friends in their sad bereavement.
Another dear loved one has passed on before,
And there she stands waiting
At Heaven's bright door,
With other dear, loved ones,
Who have gained that bright shore.

evening.

Jumped on a Ten Penny Nail.

The little daughter of Mr. J. N.
Powell jumped on an inverted rake made of ten penny nails, and thrust one nail entirely through her foot and a second one half way through. Chamberlain's Pain Balm was promptly applied, and five minutes later the pain had disappeared and no more suffering was experienced. In three days the child was wearing her shoe as usual and with absolutely no discomfort. Mr. Powell is a well known merchant of Forkland,
Va. Pain Balm is an antiseptic and heals such injuries without maturation and in one-third the time required by the usual treatment.

Catarrh

The cause exists in the blood, in what causes inflammation of the mucous membrane.

It is therefore impossible to cure
the disease by local applications.

It is positively dangerous to neglect it, because it always affects the stomach and deranges the general health, and is likely to develop into consumption.

Many have been radically and permanently cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. It cleanses the blood and has a peculiar alterative and tonic effect. E. Long, California Junction, Iowa, writes: "I had catarrh three years, lost my appetite and could not sleep. My head pained me and I felt bad all over. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and now have a good appetite, sleep well, and have no symptoms of catarrh."

Promises to cure and keeps the promise. It is better not to put off treatment—buy Hood's today.

WHAT A BLESSING.

Many of Our Readers are Learning to Appreciate.

What a blessing it is. Sought after by thousands. Many a miserable man is happy now. Nights of unrest, days of trouble. An itching skin disease means this. Itching Piles mean it. Eczema just as bad, and just as hard to cure.

But Doan's Ointment relieves at once, and cures all itching of the skin. A blessing to a suffering public. Here's proof to back our statement. Mr. Samuel Carr, of 8 School street, Haverhill, Mass., says: "I procured Doan's Ointment for an eruption on my leg which caused me considerable anxiety. The treatment gave satisfactory results and warrants me in saying that Doan's Ointment acts up to the representations made for it."

Doan's Ointment for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name, Doan's, and take no substitutes.

THE NEWS PUZZLE.

THE MAID IS LOOKING FOR FREDDIE. CAN YOU ASSIST HER?

THE PUZZLER

No. 305.—Fable With Anagrams. The Shepherd Boy and the Wolf.—A shepherd boy who took care of his flock not far from a given place used to name himself at mites by crying out, "Flow, flow!" "Tow" or there times his trick succeeded. The whole gave him a ring-nun to his cats-in-seas, when all the return they got saw to be had-glue at for their is-nap. At said one day the flow came indeed. The boy cried out in terror, but his big-herons, supposing him to be at his old ports, paid no heed to his cries, and the fowl devoured the sheep. So the boy led-near when it was too late that liars are not duster-T even when they tell the truth.

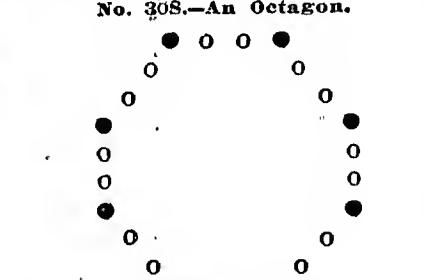

No. 306.—Charade. Obeyant to a mute command, My first dies, far and fleet, Frantic across the listening land, Unhelped by wings or feet, And often bears from love's fond hand My second, dear and sweet.

My second, which in every place Fond hearts will clasp and prize, But yet my second loses grace When, as I own, with sighs, It sometimes clouds the kindest face And fires the fairest eyes.

My whole, with brightest bloom replete, Yields to a doom unjust, A grievous fate condemned to meet, Wherever it is thrust, Swept roughly under servile feet And trampled in the dust.

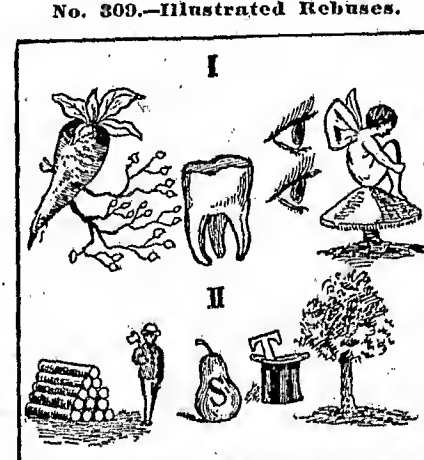

No. 307.—Half Square. 1. A certain small quadruped, very slender and agile. 2. To lay as in a bed. 3. To help. 4. To place. 5. A masculine nickname. 6. A letter.

No. 308.—An Octagon.

1. A period of time. 2. A flower. 3. A college founded in 1440 by Henry VI. 4. A recess. 5. A river. 6. A domestic animal. 7. A game usually played by boys. 8. A flower.

No. 309.—Illustrated Rebuses.

No. 310.—Hollow Diamond.

1. A weaver's frame. 2. A winged insect. 3. A plant whose fibers are used for making rope. 4. To register, as the names of voters.

No. 311.—A Diagonal Acrostic.

All the words described contain the same number of letters. When rightly guessed and written one below another, the diagonal beginning with the upper left hand letter and ending at the lower right hand letter will spell the name of one of the 13 original states.

Crosswords: 1. The surname of a president of the United States. 2. The capital of the state which my diagonal spells. 3. The scene of a famous surrender; also in the state spelled by my diagonals. 4.

A gathering or assembly. 5. The surname borne by two presidents. 6. The home of Washington. 7. A large body of water which bounds one side of the state named by my diagonals. 8. A large river of the United States.

No. 312.—Buried Geographical Names. I feel quite melancholy after hearing such a dismal tale—An island in the Mediterranean. The burglars broke into the hotel and stole dozens of silver spoons—A town in Spain.

He speaks in a manner which shows him to be very clever on all these subjects—A town in Italy. When I have finished writing this page, no addition can be made—A city in Italy.

Angels' Visits. We are told that angels' visits are few and far between. In fact, no man is now on earth Who has an angel seen. —Chicago News.

New Haven Road Employees Who Struck Will Be Reinstated

New Haven, Nov. 25.—The New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company announced Saturday night that the strike at Harlem river had been declared off.

The following is the proposition made by the company to the committee of the strikers and accepted by them:

"We will reinstate all the men that went out so far and so fast as we can use them, but cannot, in fairness, re-leave men who are now in our service who are competent to discharge the duties of their respective positions."

"All vacancies will be filled with the old men until all are provided for. This is to apply to all who report for duty before 10 A. M. tomorrow, provided the strike is declared off before 9:15 o'clock tonight."

"All complaints of unfair treatment in filling the aforesaid vacancies will be promptly investigated."

"Though only the members of the brotherhood of trainmen are directly concerned in the agreement, the company expects that their action will influence the non-union strikers, of whom there are said to be about 200, or two-thirds of the total number out on strike."

Proposed Consolidation Approved

Boston, Nov. 23.—At a meeting of the directors of the National Shawmut bank yesterday, it was voted to recommend to stockholders acceptance of proposition to consolidate with the Third National bank and to increase the capital stock by $50,000 to $3,500,000.

An Important Test.

Your Life May Be Prolonged by Applying It

Do you realize the importance of the kidneys and bladder? when diseased they make a lot of trouble—tear down the system and create gravel (stone in the bladder). Women often suffer from so-called "female weakness," when their trouble really lies with the kidneys and bladder. Try this test. Put some urine in a tumbler. Let it stand twenty-four hours. If there is a sediment, a cloudy or milky appearance, your kidneys are sick. If you are obliged to urinate often, especially during the night; if your urine stains linen, if you have scalding pains in passing it, if your back pains you, your bladder and kidneys are diseased; you should at once take the greatest of all kidney medicines, Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. It has cured the most distressing cases; it will cure you. It corrects the bad effects of beer or whiskey, will cure old and chronic cases of Rheumatism and Dyspepsia and acts gently yet promptly on the bowels. Favorite Remedy is sold for one dollar a bottle at all drug stores. You may have a trial bottle of Favorite Remedy with a pamphlet of valuable medical advice sent free by mail post-paid, by sending your address to the Dr. David Kennedy Corporation, Rondout, N. Y., and mentioning this paper. The proprietors of this paper guarantee the genuineness of this liberal offer.

GOT A FAT ROLL

Robbers Took Seven Hundred One-Dollar Bills

Other News of Interest From Various Parts of New England States.

Avon, Mass., Nov. 25.—Shortly after 6 o'clock Saturday night, Mrs. George Linfield, 70 years old, had $700 forcibly taken from her by two masked men at the point of a revolver. The two men entered the house and found Mrs. Linfield and her daughter in the sitting room. The men had white cloths over their faces, with holes cut for their eyes. They asked Mrs. Linfield for money, but she denied that she had any, and then the men proceeded to ransack the room. Not finding any in the bureau drawers, they came back to Mrs. Linfield and tearing open the front of her dress discovered $700 in $1 bills. The Linfields had recently sold their place and the money was part of the result of the sale.

The police were immediately notified after the robbery took place, and the authorities in all the adjoining towns were notified. There is some expectation that the robbers may be apprehended.

Succumbed to Deadly Fumes

North Adams, Mass., Nov. 25.—A party of eight tracklayers in Hoosac tunnel yesterday began to be overcome by gas and smoke in the tunnel and started for the portal. Some fell behind the others, Michael Powers being the last of all. When the other seven reached the portal and found that Powers was missing, they went back on a construction train and found him lying unconscious about 2000 feet from the portal. He was taken on the train, but died before reaching the North Adams station. The tunnel is ventilated by a large fan, but a blizzard was raging and the atmospheric conditions made the fan ineffectual.

New England Storm Swept

Boston, Nov. 25.—A heavy November gale swept over New England yesterday, and its force was felt to some extent in and around Boston. The most damage, however, was done along the tide-water front from two very high tides. The storm put a check on navigation, but as it had been well predicted there were no wrecks and no loss of life in this vicinity. Naturally there were stories told of great inroads of the ocean at shore resorts, but careful inquiry fails to show that damage done in any locality was greater than is expected from storms at this time of the year.

Slugged Husband With Axe

Boston, Nov. 25.—Charged with attempting to kill her husband with an axe, Mrs. Mary Lewis, a colored wife of five months, and barely 20 years of age, is under arrest. Lewis was cut through his scalp, having a wound three inches long. According to the police the prisoner is declared to have stated that she bought the axe for the express purpose of killing her husband and that she was sorry the weapon was not sharp. Lewis is said to have been a difficult husband, but the visits of another colored man to the house caused frequent trouble and finally led to the assault.

Railroad Responsible For Death

Hollis, Me., Nov. 22.—The coroner's jury which was formed to investigate the death of Clarence B. Vittum, who was killed by a train on the Boston and Maine railroad here on Nov. 12, yesterday returned a verdict holding the railroad responsible for his death.

Autos Supplant Stage Coaches

Hartford, Nov. 23.—The Woodbury Mobile Transit company has been organized for the purpose of operating a line of automobile stages in several country towns in western Connecticut. The automobiles will supplant the old-fashioned stage coaches.

Third Rail Will Have a Rest

Boston, Nov. 21.—It is announced that the third rail system of the consolidated road, between Cohasset and Braintree, as well as the line between Nantasket Junction and Hull, will not be operated this winter.

Asthma Cure Free!

Asthmalene Brings Instant Relief and Permanent Cure in all Cases.

SENT ABSOLUTELY FREE ON RECEIPT OF POSTAL.

There is nothing like Asthmalene. It brings instant relief, even in the worst cases. It cures when all else fails.

The Rev. C. F. Wells, of Villa Ridge, Ill., says: "Your trial bottle of Asthmalene received in good condition. I cannot tell you how thankful I feel for the good derived from it. I was a slave, chained with putrid sore throat and asthma for ten years. I despaired of ever being cured. I saw your advertisement for the cure of this dreadful and tormenting disease, asthma, and thought you had overspoken yourselves, but resolved to give it a trial. To my astonishment, the trial acted like a charm. Send me a full-size bottle."

We want to send to every sufferer a trial treatment of Asthmalene, similar to the one that cured Mr. Wells. We'll send it by mail POSTPAID, ABSOLUTELY FREE OF CHARGE, to any sufferer who will write for it, even on a postal. Never mind, though you are despairing, however bad your case, Asthmalene will relieve and cure. The worse your case, the more glad we are to send it. Do not delay. Write at once, addressing homeboy I ever saw. His mother was dead and his father a drunkard. One leg was a great deal shorter than the other, so he was very lame; his hair was like tow, and two pale blue eyes looked out from a face deeply pitted with small pox. But he was a good boy and I finally got him a home outside upon a farm. He left there afterwards and worked in other places, also learned telegraphy, and at one time had $400 in the bank, but his health failed and he had to go back to farming. He has visited our home in Buckfield twice and seems to look upon my husband and myself as relatives.

Intemperate Mothers.

Another little fellow in the hospital filled me with pity the first time I saw him.

For several months I taught at the main buildings when I first went there, but used to visit the hospital in leisure hours. This little fellow was twelve years old, but his body was small and his legs were paralyzed and shrunken. He used to get about by pulling himself along the floor with his hands, and dragging his poor little limbs behind him. I used to go to the play room and read him stories and give him fruit and candy, till I thought the boy was really fond of me, although the housekeeper told me that he was the ugliest boy in the building. In June I decided to go home and went to the hospital to tell the children good bye. I felt particularly sorry to leave Arthur. I found him playing in the ward with several larger boys, and told him I was going away and asked him if he was sorry. He laughed and said "No." Inexpressibly hurt, I walked away thinking after all the housekeeper is right, all he cared was for what I gave him. During the summer at home I often thought of the child, and wondered how I could have been so deceived in him. In the fall the superintendent asked me to come back as housekeeper at the hospital. I went, and Arthur was one of the first to see me when I came in, but I simply said "how do you do, Arthur," and treated him exactly as I did the others. For several days his great black eyes seemed to look at me wistfully every time I went into the room, but I said nothing to him, until one day as I was passing through the playroom he crawled to my side and pulled my dress. I looked down upon the little fellow and said, "Well, Arthur, what is it?" With tears streaming from his eyes, he said, "Say, Miss Hooper, don't you remember when you went away last spring you came up to tell us good bye?" "Yes, Arthur, I remember it very well, and I remember too, you said you were not sorry I was going away." "Oh, I was, I was. I felt dreadfully sorry, but there was a lot of big boys listening and they would have teased me and called me 'your pet' if I had said yes, and I didn't dare too. I've felt dreadfully sorry ever since, and when I heard you were coming back and going to 'mind us,' I could hardly wait for you to come."

Since I left there, I heard that Gov. Greenhalge of Massachusetts became interested in the boy and procured him a good home. And so I might go on and tell of many similar cases of children suffering for their parents' sins, but this is enough.

Now, we are all anxious to do good in the world, to relieve the poor and suffering and to replace ignorance and vice with knowledge and purity. But we cannot all leave our homes and work in slums. Neither can we found orphan asylums or "Good Will" homes, or run State institutions, but we can each do a little good, sow a few good seeds and fill the place God has given us, in the very best way possible.

When Mrs. Stevens organized this Union, she told us that those who did not feel able to do much of the work or attend regularly, could be of help by wearing the white ribbon, and paying their yearly dues. In all societies the work naturally falls to a certain few, even though others would gladly help, and the workers gain the most benefit from it, but I believe those silent members are also a help to the society, and by simply paying their dues, they feel an interest in the work and cause which they otherwise would not.

To Mothers of Large Families

In this workaday world few women are so placed that physical exertion is not constantly demanded of them in their daily life.

We make a special appeal to mothers of large families whose work is never done, and many of whom suffer, and suffer for lack of intelligent aid.

To women, young or old, rich or poor, we extend an invitation to accept free advice. Oh, women! do not let your lives be sacrificed when a word of advice at the first approach of weakness, may fill your future years with healthy joy. Address a letter to Mrs. Pinkham's Laboratory, Lynn, Mass., and you will not be disappointed.

"When I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was not able to do my housework. I suffered terribly at time of menstruation. Several doctors told me they could do nothing for me. Thanks to the Pinkham advice and medicine I am now well, and can do the work for eight in the family."

"I would recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all mothers with large families."—Mrs. CARRIE BELLEVILLE, Ludington, Mich.

Perhaps all do not accomplish what they really might, if they gave the subject closer thought, in a broader light.

In relation to this, I will state that many excellent women fall into intemperate habits in other things than strong drink.

There is intemperance in eating and language, dressing, working and playing.

The mother should make a study of selecting and preparing food for her family which is simple and nutritious. Mothers are often to blame in creating appetites in their children for highly seasoned food which leads to an appetite for something stronger.

Another great source of trouble is a woman's tongue. We hear a bit of news or gossip or mayhap, even slander, about another, and it is so easy to pass it along, with a little added strength. We do not know where it will stop. Perhaps there was no truth in it when it started, or at most a grain of truth. But the ball grows and rolls, till by and by, it gains such weight and momentum that a final push from the tongue of a thoughtless woman may well crush an innocent person.

We are intemperate in our dress; often buying what we could easily do without, and the money so spent might help someone who was really suffering.

We feel that we must dress our children as well as others, that they may not feel mortified, and thus bring them up with false ideas.

Some women are so wedded to housework and so afraid of a speck of dust that they stay at home so closely that cobwebs grow in their thoughts, and their brain becomes rusty, and their vision narrow.

The work of the Union in sewing for the poor and needy is a grand work, and we can well afford to do away with many a tuck and ruffle and bit of fancy-work for ourselves, in order to put our time and money where it will do more good.

Woman's sphere is broadening so fast that with it, come equally fast, new duties, fashions and follies.

We pride ourselves upon our schools, societies and clubs. We are thankful for the things which give us inspiration, ambition and broader education, lift us out of old ruts, give us new ideas, and help to make us bright, intelligent and useful women at home and in public.

All these things are useful and are blessings, so long as we are not intemperate concerning them. But there are just the same home duties and family cares, that there were before we had these privileges, and only so far as we can attend these without detracting from home and family, are these a blessing. Just as soon as home becomes secondary, then do we become "intemperate mothers."

There is another kind of nervous intemperance which we have all seen if we have not experienced. How many people "work on their nerve." It is a national malady, found in its worst stages in America. There are thousands of reasons for it and millions of victims. In a measure we can overcome it if we realize that we are overworking, or in anyway abusing our nervous system. I learned a very good lesson upon that a few years ago, which I have told before, but perhaps it will bear repeating. It was one of those days which you all have seen, when I was trying to do two days work in one, with barely strength for one. I hurried and worried, and dropped things and scolded and made it unpleasant for myself and all about me.

A few days previous, I had glanced out of the window as a heavily loaded team was passing, drawn by two fine, great horses; rather—one of the horses was pulling the most of the load, while the other was fretting and chafing, with tongue out and froth dropping from it, her sides wet and quivering with nervousness, and yet she was accomplishing very little work. While her mate, with head down and steady muscles, was pulling three-fourths of the load. Our hired man came in just then, and said, "That high mare of Woods' is no earthly use; she is so nervous, she just wears herself all out a fretting and don't pull half the load."

I thought but little about it then, but on this morning of which I was speaking, about eleven o'clock I found myself tired out, but still I kept nervously at work, till my younger sister, who had been working up stairs where it was cold, came into the kitchen and took an apple from a dish on the table and sat calmly down by the stove to warm her feet and munch the apple. Angry words came to my lips, for I wondered how she could sit down a minute when there was so much to do. But all of a sudden, a vision of that "high mare" came to me, fretting and sweating and accomplishing so little, and I saw myself in a new light.—I was doing the same thing, with my over wrought nerves.—With a sigh of shame and weariness, I took another apple and sat down beside sister and rested. After that we pulled steadily together, and the load moved all right. But I have had to remind myself of it many times since, and I often see others who remind me of Woods' high mare.

So, sisters, while we are banded together to help others in their weakness, let us each remember our own failings, and be "temperate in eating, drinking, and language," "setting a watch before the doors of our mouths."
